HONGKONG, DECEMBER 17cm, 1888. WHILE the heavy fall in the gold price of made. At present there seems happily no prospect of the prediction being fulfilled. The tendency since has been slightly upwards Possibly the anticipations of the purport of tory Schools Ordinance, 1886 the Currency Commission's report and, durmay have had something to do with this improved steadiness. We think, however, there under existing offcumstances, and that violent fluctuations in the relative values are not likely to be repeated, in the absence of further extraordinary circumstances affecting the currency, such for instance as the closing of great discoveries of either the one metal or lism fluctuations from the latter cause would be obviated, and there would be no inducement for the Indian or any other Government to adopt measures calculated to cause violent disturbance of values. Bi-metallism nearly all the evening. is, as we have contended for years past, the true policy in relation to currency. Had would have maintained their value, It would restore these coins to their previous ratiobetween the two metals as the proper one terwards with other matters of detail. Any fixed ratio, they hold, would be better than agitation. the uncertainty of the last twelve years. If an international congress were held on the sub-_rect_forthwith and a conclusion come to it a value of from Ss. to Ss. 2d. Independently of any international agreement it will about these figures for many years to come The disturbing causes which came int operation in 1876 have exhausted themselves, and in the absence of any further convulsion in currency matters, the present relative values of the precious metals are not likely to vary much. It is to prevent the possibility of such convulsions that wa hold bi-metallism to be so essential to the world's commercial and industrial A most disastrous mistake wil be made should the lessons of the last twelve years' experience be disregarded, for new causes of disturbance may arise unless measures be taken to secure stability. We think, however, that no immediate apprehension of great fluctuations need be felt. The scarcity of gold is being balanced by the constantly growing banking facilities which prevail in Western countries, and, the largequantities of silver that have been thrown on the market of late years having been absorbed and the glut having disappeared, the annual output on its present basis is not more than sufficient to meet requirements. On the former point we may quote some remarks made by Mr. J. W. BIRCH, the President of the Bankers' Institute, at the last meeting of that body. Mr. BIECH remarked that on referring to the issues both of country bankers and joint-stock banks in October, 1878, and October, 1888, and to the Clearing-house returns for the first nine months of those two years, he found that, while there had evidently been an enormous in crease in the business of the country, it have been conducted with a much less amount of ordinary currency, the vacuum being filled up by the various systems of credit. economy in the use of gold has been going on in an increasing ratio for a long time past, but is, we believe, still far from having its bigbest development. The expansion of trade that began in the fifties and that has revolutionised the commerce of the world has been ascribed by some to the and California and the increased facilities afforded to industry by the expansion of the currency; by others to improved communications consequent on the general adoption of

by England of free trade. All these causes come absorbed, and of late years the annual production has been unequal to the demand, increased as that demand has been last adjusted themselves to the rew conditions, and another era of prosperity has sot in which, we trust, and think there is such "supers" as they can command, but while reason to believe, will not be of short continuance. The economy in the use of gold THE CHRONICLE AND DIRECTORY referred to by the President of the Bankers' Institute is equivalent, so far as it extends to a fresh supply of the metal and trade will prosper in proportion as this economy is increased. With regard to silver, without any legislation on its behalf the metal has steadied itself at a price far short of that to which it was predicted it would decline. forms the standard of value for the whole of Asia, which, with its expanding trade, will require a constantly increased supply, China, it is known, would be a ready borrower, but she wantsellver, and in view of the late course of events she has hitherto objected to contract a loan repayable in gold, while capitalists working on a gold basis have been unwilling to lend on a condition of repayment in silver. There would now be little risk to either party, whether the loan were expressed in gold or silver, if, as we suppose, the two metals in relation to each other have again arrived at a state of equilibrium.

For any defects as regards stage arrangements and soonic effects of course, blame can hardly be laid on the Company, and the audience are, and justly so, indelgent on these points, but we think if the stage manager could find the time to bestow a little attention on his "supers" it would be exceedingly well spent. Of the individual efforts of the Company on Saturday night we can almost without exception, speak highly, particularly in the later part of the piece. Mr. Willard, as Bob Brierly, was perhaps a little out of his element, but he gave such a careful Valse. doubt as a good all-round actor. His only defeet was that at times he was a little inaudible. The accustic properties of the Theatre Royal are anything but perfect, and unless this is coustantly kept in mind by the actor, some of his best lines are liable to be lost. Mr. Willard's scenes with Miss Patey as May Edwards were always good, but perhaps the best bit of acting begave was in Act III , in Mr. Gibson's office, with Mr. Gibson and Hawkshaw. The farewell ball tendered by the officers the Regiment to the residents of the colony was held at Murray Barracks on Friday night and proved a very great success. A few years ego Count Andressy told an interesting story, which shows that are had dulled Prince Gortschakoff's faculties some time before his death. "The policy, as you know, of Russia at the Berlin Conference was to secure a large Bulgaria." said Count Andressy, " but she was afraid openly to oppose England and Austria. So a map was sent to the Prince, with two lines drawn upon it, one showing the size of the principality Russia desired, and the other marking the area she would, if necessary, accept, Armed with this map. Prince Gorischahoff came down to the conference, and with deplorable want of forethought, laid it open on the table. Before long the two lines caught the quick eye of Lord Besconsfield, added Count Andressy, his shaggy eyebrows twitching with the Prince being in sublime ignorance of what was going on behind his back. I need herely say I took the hint, and Russia had to be content with what she said she would accept, and not with what she would like to get. In this way the small Bulgaria was formed."

It is only a few years ago since all America was shaking its sides over the way American Minister Schenck put his foot in it by I a very simple sot while representing the United States Government at the Court of St. James. Like most Americana Mr. Schenck was fond of a game called poker, in which some of his friends in London soon began to take an interest. Mrs. Langtry is superstitious. Rather than begin a journey on Friday in a pleasurable manner, she recently started for the west on Thursday night by a slow train. The limited supress which left New York on Friday morning would have brought her to her journey's end just as soon, and she was urged to remain because of important business. But sheatamped her feet, shook her head and said: "Friday-jamais!"

Eligible women are at a premium in Dutch India. They are so scarce in that country that young men who wish to get married write to their friends in Holland to find them wives. The friend selects a willing lady and forwards her photograph. If all is satisfactory the would-be husband sends back a soiled left hand glove with power of attorney. The friend then marries the young lady as a sort of legal proxy, and the marriage is as binding as though the groom himself were present.

At a cost of £10,000 the Victory has been made water-tight, and it is said that she will last another hundred years. Two centuries is a very long life for a ship, and it is doubtful if the Victory will really last on long. In the nature of things, an historic ship can have nothing like the life of an historic house; and Nelson's flagship is the only really old vessel that we possess. The vessel which brought Charles II. back to England at the Restoration was preserved for a long time, but it fell to pieces at last.

W. S. Gilbert, the librettist, is a tall man, with gray hair and close-cut whishers. He is a reat stage manager. Though extremely dignified, he does not hegitate to go through the drollest contortions of body or the most free and easy dance step to illustrate the idea to those who are to interpret him.

Rider Hargard has a curious theory regarding the fate of Henry M. Stanley. He thinks that the explorer is alive, but that he has been seized, taken into the interior, of Africa and deified by some of the tribes. He is inclined to think that Stanley will be treated with the greatest kindness and veneration, but that he will not be permitted to escape. When the interior tribes find a real live idel who seems to them to be god-like in appearance and power they are not likely to give him up. All of which in about as probable as Haggard's story " She."

On one occasion there had been disagreements between the theatrical authorities and Aberdeen students, who paid off their scare in a novel way. They booked all the private boxes for the first night of the pentomime. The pantomime was produced, but when the curtain rose on the first night not an eye was turned towards the stage. The house, instead, clocked at the boxes and burst into a rose of laughter. There, dangling down over the gilt and velvet front of all the boxes were seen dosens of legs but not a face was visible. The moment the curtain rose every student had cast himself on his back and thrown his feet on to the ledge of the box. And so they all remained for the greater part of the evening. NOW ON SALE. IMPERIAL QUARTO. INNGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN Pronunciation.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance span Ports.

Both will be received at the Office until 5 P.M. same the Court and Punti pronunciations are given day; all Parcel Packages should be marked to the accents being carefully marked on the best principle bitherto attained. The typography Consular Invoices to accompany Cargo displays the success of an attempt to make the destined to points beyond San Francisco Chinese and English type correspond in the size in the United States should be sent to the of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins For further information as to Passage and and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration:

Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively, with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested regular Steamers of the PACIFIC COAST in Chine it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

It comprises upwards of two thousand large 4 Vols. IMPERIAL QUARTO, Prico, $20. A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of SIX or more Copies.
